THE STORY OF "LORENA"

The Author of the Familiar Lines a Resident of Neenah-A Romantic Tale.

Chicago Times.
About the year 1855 there appeared in the musical circles of the West a song which, for twelve years, had a run rarely attained by popular melodies. The music was a peculiar charm, the words were particularly touching, and their very length, extending to eight long verses, suggested to the reader a story back of them. In fact, the extreme pathos of the words contributed to the composition its wonderful success. It was sung everywhere, in parlors, on the street, and in the camp of the contending armies. In the northern army it was immensely popular, and it found its way south through Louisville and Cincinnati, and during the rebellion it was the only piece sung in southern homes, and, excepting martial songs, about the only one sung in the confederate camps. Every where was "Lorena." A steamer on the Ohio was named Lorena, engines on western roads were called Lorena, and a person now sometimes meets in society young ladies named Lorena, called that by mothers twenty years ago. That the song had a story nearly every one familiar with it supposed, and supposed correctly, and it may not be uninteresting at this late day to give admirers of the famous melody the facts in the love affair.

The author of the words was the Rev. H. D. L. Webster. He studied in the Common School, and in the College of the Holy Spirit, and was editor of the College paper. In the year 1848, being then 21 years of age, and full of poetry and romance, he was enjoying his first pastorate in Janesville, Ohio. His leading parishioner was a wealthy manufacturer, whose residence was upon one of the many hills which surrounded that smoky town. The house was about half a mile out, and the entrance upon which it was seated was the one referred to in the song:

"Twas flowery May,
When up the hill we climbed,
To watch the dying of the day,
And hear the distant church bells chimed."

There lived in his family a younger sister of his wife, who was the leading singer in the choir. She was nineteen years of age, small of stature, had blue eyes and light, brown hair, and was as fair as a lily. She was not only a sweet singer, but she was as full of poetry and romance as her pastor, and they soon became very much attached. Their loving did not, however, "prosper well," for the family were proud and aristocratic, and "had higher notions of the girl's future than to sanction her marriage with a poor preacher." As she was dependent upon them for a home, she was forced to yield to their counsel—Mr. Webster says he now thinks it wise counsel—and they were obliged to give each other up. It was, however, the strong will and the proud spirit of the sister, more than the opposition of the brother-in-law, that separated them, or rather, kept Lorena from him. Lorena seems to have been passive, indecisive in character, and submissive in the hands of a strong-willed sister. Mr. Webster saw her for the last time at her home, learned of the sister's unconquerable opposition, heard his fate, and took a quiet but peaceful farewell, very little being said. The night she wrote him a last letter, in which she used the words, so well remembered by those familiar with the song, "If we try we may forget." It was eight years after that he wrote:

"For 'If we try, we may forget,'
Were words of those long years ago."

Yes, these were words of Lorena. They burn within my memory yet. They touch some tender chord, Lorena. Which thrill and tremble with regret. There is a future. Oh! thank God, of life this is so small a part. The dust to dust beneath the sod. But there, up there, 'tis heart to heart.

The effect of the separation was to crush the young man, and writing to a friend five years ago, twenty-six years after the occurrence, he says: "I doubt if all the dark lines are erased from my heart yet." He resigned his pastorate and sought another field, smothering his pain by hard study and work. And the only sign of that pain the world ever saw was the heart-cry in the song of "Lorena."

In 1856, he was residing at Racine, Wis., where he met J. P. Webster, the composer, who, though of the same name, is no relation to him. J. P. Webster was writing song music, and was troubled to find appropriate words. Rev. Mr. Webster told him that he would write a song, and in two days he produced it, entitled "Bertha," a mere fancy name. When the composer came to set it to music, he wanted a name of three syllables, accented on the second, and the author made up the name of "Lorena."

The young lady's name was not Lorena, however, nor Bertha, but Ella. It is said that she lost her vivacity and sunny, winning ways after they had parted, and never regained them; and that she is now a sad, sickly woman, past the prime of life. She is the wife of a judge, and lived for many years at fronton, on the Ohio. When last heard from, however, several years ago, she was traveling in Europe. Her "proud and haughty sister has long since passed over the river, where 'tis heart to heart,' last of all a farewell." Her brother-in-law died only a few weeks ago. Mr. Webster, also past the prime of life, is married, and lives at Neenah, Wis., a minister, and editor of a local paper.

My practice is not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no false promises. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained of years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. Besides Mr. Sleep there were three boys confined to their beds, but the others were all getting along well and able to be about, and there were no new cases. ## THE CONGREGATIONAL CHAPEL.

The Congregational church and society last evening decided to proceed with the rebuilding of their chapel, at the rear of their church. It is not expected to finish it now, but the work of raising the walls and inclosing it will be commenced at once, and the inclosure will be completed as soon as possible. The building can stand till spring, when the interior can be finished. The contract has been let to O. F. Nowlan, of this city, for $1,920, which of course, does not include the inside work. The Congregational church has managed its financial and business matters well, and it is a cause of congratulation that the way now seems clear for the building of the chapel, which will prove a great convenience to them in many respects.

ROUSING RALLY.

A Crowded House to Hear Governor Smith and Hon. Thomas M. Nichol.

Last night there was a rousing Republican mass meeting held at Lappin’s music hall. The seats both down stairs and upstairs were filled, and there was a goodly amount of enthusiasm shown. The Bowler City Band gave some stirring music while the audience was gathering, and there was animation and interest manifest on every hand.

Dr. Henry Palmer called the audience to order, and nominated Congressman Williams for Chairman, who was elected with a rousing chorus of “ayes.” Mr. Williams, after thanking them for the honor, introduced Hon. R. H. Baker, of Racine, the Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who chanced to be present, having come here to make arrangements with the speakers for other appointments. Mr. Baker did not try to make a speech, as he said he was not here for that purpose, but he briefly spoke of the encouraging outlook all over the state, and gave an outline of what was being done. The Northern portion of the State was being well covered by Judge Downs, of Arkansas. Col. Wilcox was doing noble work in the northeast portion of the State. Arrangements had been made for Mr. Blaine to speak at two places to be named by himself, and Mr. Blaine had chosen Milwaukee and Madison. Congressman Barrows was also to speak sometime during the campaign, and Zach Chandler was to speak in Milwaukee, Oshkosh and Janesville, the date fixed for this city being the 30th of October. This announcement was received with a round of applause which indicated that old warrior would meet with a rousing reception here.

Governor Smith was then introduced by the chairman, and spoke for about three-quarters of an hour. He presented facts and figures from the official reports showing that the State finances were never in so healthy and satisfactory a condition, and that the reduction of expenditures had been great during the past ten years. Every dollar due to the State has been collected, and every dollar due from the State has been paid, and there was a larger balance of cash on hand than ever. This showing was received with loud cheers. The Governor after reviewing the condition of the State, and the result of the Republican administration, turned their attention to National affairs and the necessity of having Wisconsin take an unequivocal position in favor of Republicanism. He handled the Southern question in an able manner, showing the true condition of affairs and the animus which actuated them and their sympathies. Many of the points made by the speaker were strong, and were endorsed by hearty applause.

Hon. Thomas M. Nichol was then introduced. Mr. Nichol is a man who is a marvel in some respects. He is packed with all the facts of financial legislation, and all the date of history, and he has a happy way of dealing these out to his listeners. He illustrated his position strikingly and built his arguments upon indisputable facts, which could not but convince. He dealt Greenbackism some terribly hard blows, and made it condemn itself out of its own mouth. He spoke for nearly two hours, giving most of this time to the financial question. Toward the close he compared the records of the Republican and Democratic parties, showing up the inconsistencies of the latter in a very clear and unanswerable manner. Mr. Nichol kept the audience in the best of humor, and was frequently interrupted by the outburst of applause which the hearers couldn’t help but give vent to. Everybody listened closely to the speakers, and when the meeting was declared at a close, on suggestion of the Chairman, three rousing cheers were given for the speakers, and the audience dispersed.

TRAVELERS, stop at the ASTER HOUSE, NEW YORK.

FULTON MUSICALS.

A very enjoyable treat was given the citizens of Fulton, at the residence of Mrs. Robert Stone, who it seems has just purchased of Mr. Warren Collins, one of those fine Estey organs, for which (by the way) Mr. Collins is justly noted. This being the usual church social, a large number were present, among which were the pastor, Rev. O. G. May, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Pomeroy, Mr. Drown, Mrs. Lintz, Mrs. Sayre, Mrs. Palmer and others. The musical part of the programme was very ably and satisfactorily conducted by Miss Ella Few, of Leavenworth, Kansas, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond, Mr. Collins, and Mr. R. C. ## BIG FALL IN HAY.

The hay press building, near the site of the old Milwaukee & St. Paul freight depot was badly shaken up this morning about 3 o’clock, by the falling of the floor on which was stored a large amount of hay. The weight of this hay caused the timbers to give way and the whole floor fell, hay and all making a terrible crash. One side of the building was pulled in and the other bulged out, while the roof humped up its back as though it didn’t like it. The horses and the power were beneath the floor which gave way, and work was going on as usual, the press of late having been run day and night. In the tumble some of the horses were knocked over, but none were hurt, and the employees around the place were not hurt in any way. The building stands, but somewhat out of shape. It will be put in good condition again, and the floor so strengthened that no weight of hay can cause it to weaken again.

The law of gravity is not more certain in its action than this new Harris & Smith Safety Lamp to extinguish itself, should it be overturned or dropped from the hand. A child can use it but cannot have a serious accident with it.

A STUPID SEARCH.

A Milwaukee Reporter Fails to Find Baumgarten, When He is Almost Under His Nose.

Sheriff Comstock’s Statement.

The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin in its issue yesterday contains a lengthy article descriptive of its reporter’s fruitless search for Baumgarten. It appears that the reporter went to the jail there, and that the jailer and a deputy sheriff denied that Baumgarten had been, or that he was then in the jail. The reporter on taking them to task for suppressing the fact, those officers showed him through the jail and he failed to find the sought-for prisoner. Thereupon the Wisconsin opens its fire upon Sheriff Comstock for trying to mislead the public, and denounces him bitterly. Whether the Wisconsin, like some other papers, was irritated at the fact that they did not find out what had become of Baumgarten until after the Gazette had published the account, or whether the Wisconsin was honest in its intention of getting the fact, but stupid in its attempt, is a question on which there may be a just variance of opinion.

We met Sheriff Comstock this morning, and in the presence of others, he endorsed the account given in the Gazette as true in all respects. “I tell you it was just as the Gazette said—every word of it is true. If these fellows who pretend to know so much about it just want to put up something on it, all right. If not, they had better shut up.” We didn’t wonder that Comstock was indignant at the attack made on him. If facts were at the bottom of it, it would be all right, but Sheriff Comstock assures us that the statement already given in the Gazette, is correct, and hence the attack was wholly uncalled for.

In addition to what has been already given to the public, the Sheriff informs us that on arriving in Milwaukee he proceeded directly to the Sheriff’s office, with the prisoner. There were a number of persons in the room, but none knew him or the prisoner. He passed through into a back room, taking Baumgarten with him, and there talked the matter over with the Sheriff, and arranged for the safe keeping of the prisoner. The Sheriff of Milwaukee county thought the jail was too crowded, and that the prisoner had better be kept in the House of Correction. Baumgarten was accordingly taken there, and one of the officers was deputized by Sheriff Comstock to take charge of the prisoner. The Milwaukee Sheriff assured Sheriff Comstock that the prisoner would be kept safely, and laughingly remarked “if we can’t take care of him any other way we’ll run him across Lake Michigan rather than have him taken.” Of course the prisoner will be safe without any such further removals. The Sheriff probably did not inform the jailer, and probably kept the matter from Deputy Sheriff Aldrich, and the most of the other officers, not immediately concerned in the matter, as it would do no good to let them know it, and the Sheriff tried to avoid publicity, for too free an advertisement of the prisoner’s whereabouts would cause streams of visitors to pour in to try to see the notorious prisoner, and there would be a constant annoyance and trouble. Sheriff Comstock states, without any quibble or evasion, that Baumgarten was taken to Milwaukee and that he is still there, in the House of Correction, in charge of the officer whom he made his deputy. In view of these statements it seems clear how the Wisconsin has been induced to make such a contradictory statement. Its reporter only asked the jailer and one of the deputy sheriffs, who probably were honest in their denial, as the Sheriff had not told them. The reporter sought for the prisoner in the jail, when he ought to have asked for him at the House of Correction. Before the Wisconsin sets afloat another needless agitation of this kind it should get the official statement of the Sheriff of Milwaukee county as he knows better whether Baumgarten is there, than do those sub-officers who have nothing to do with the prisoner. The Wisconsin in its account carefully avoids saying anything about the Sheriff’s denying it, but gets the denial from the “Milwaukee county officers.” The sum and substance of the fact is that only one jailer and one deputy sheriff deny that he is in the jail. The Sheriff himself is not asked about it at all. The statement of Sheriff Comstock, that Baumgarten is in the House of Correction and that the Milwaukee Sheriff knows he is there, stands therefore uncontradicted.

One of the straws which substantiate the claim that Baumgarten was taken to Milwaukee is in the fact that the pictures of the prisoner which Sheriff Comstock brought back with him bear the mark of having been taken at the gallery of Frank Bishop, Jr., in Milwaukee.

It is unfortunate that the Wisconsin should attempt to revive the agitation now that Baumgarten is removed to a place of safety, and had its reporter shown a little more shrewdness and diligence in his search he would doubtless have gained far different information from that which appeared in its last evening’s issue.

Attorney William Smith, who probably knows fully as much about it as the Wisconsin reporter, says that his client is in Milwaukee without any doubt. The Wisconsin had better make another hunt.

This morning’s Milwaukee Sentinel copies a portion of the Gazette article, and also says: Notwithstanding the hateful insinuations of the small-trip newspapers that Baumgarten, the murderer of Little Sandy White, was not jailed here as the Sentinel very promptly announced, the facts were as represented on the appearance here of the sheriff of Rock county.
